Piercy Ravenstone (Pseudonym)

RAVENSTONE, PERCY (early 19th century), wrote in 1821, A few Doubts as to the Correctness of some Opinions generally entertained on the subjects of Population and Political Economy. Ravenstone was the earliest advocate of the theory of surplus value subsequently adopted by MARX (q.v.), but he was not a communist, nor did he deny the natural right to private property, which he said is “the right to the work of one’s own hands.”

[E. R. A. Seligman, “On some neglected British Economists,” Economic Journal, London, 1903].

VOLUME IX, [p. 45], ‘IDENTIFICATION OF ‘PIERCY RAVENSTONE, M.A.’ Ricardo refers several times with interest to the book, A few Doubts as to the Correctness of some Opinions generally entertained on the subjects of Population and Political Economy, ‘by Piercy Ravenstone, M.A.’¹ It has been generally accepted that ‘Piercy Ravenstone’ is a pseudonym,² and it is now possible to give the author’s real name. A copy of A few Doubts has come to light, on the title-page of which ‘Piercy Ravenstone, M.A.’ has been crossed out, and ‘Richard Puller’ written in; ‘Puller on Political Economy’ is lettered on the spine of the binding, which is contemporary; this may well have been the author’s own copy. Another copy, which is in the Feltrinelli Library in Milan, is inscribed on the fly-leaf: ‘The real author of this book was Richard Puller, brother of Sir Christopher Puller, Chief-Justice of Bengal, and uncle of Christopher Puller, member for Hertfordshire about 1858. The present head of the family is Charles Puller, of Youngsbury, Herts.’³ Of Richard Puller little else is known. He is mentioned in the will (dated 2 October 1789) of his grandfather, Christopher Puller (1707–89), a director of the Bank of England; on 7 February 1827 he was given the administration of the estate of his father, Richard Puller (1746–1826), of Painswick Court, Glos., a director of the South Sea Company. His signature and his address, Park Street, Grosvenor Square, appear on an affidavit, dated 10 October 1831, in [xxix]connection with the will of his sister, Charlotte Louisa Puller, of Painswick Court.

² See Max Beer, History of British Socialism, Vol. i, p. 251, and Kenneth Smith, The Malthusian Controversy, p. 142. Professor J. Dorfman, in his Introduction to the reprint of A few Doubts (A. M. Kelley, New York, 1966), has suggested that Ravenstone was the Anglican minister, Edward Edwards, but there appears to be no evidence to support this conjecture.

³ Charles Puller inherited Youngsbury in 1885 and died in 1892— which fixes the time limits for this inscription.

The present edition is an exact transcript from the sixth, except that all extracts and most phrases in foreign languages have been translated into English, and a very small number of quotations, or parts of quotations, which appeared superfluous, have been struck out. A reprint of an old controversy with the “Quarterly Review” on the condition of landed property in France, which had been subjoined as an Appendix has been dispensed with.

- Ashley edition: “Edited with an introduction by Sir W. J. Ashley, M.A., M.Com., Ph.D, Formerly Vice-Principal and Professor of Commerce in the University of Birmingham, sometime Fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford”,

(London, New York, Toronto: Longmans, Green and Co., 1909) 1923 Reprint

“John Stuart Mill originally wrote the Principles of Political Economy, with some of their Applications to Social Philosophy very quickly, having studied economics under the rigorous tutelage of his father, James, since his youth. It was published in 1848 in London and was republished with changes and updates a total of seven times in Mill’s lifetime. The edition presented here is that prepared by W. J. Ashley in 1909, based on Mill’s 7th edition of 1870. Ashley followed the 7th edition with great care, noting changes in the editions in footnotes and in occasional square brackets within the text. The text provides English translations to several lengthy quotations originally quoted by Mill in French.” From OLL
