The father of the family sits here, where he can see all the action.

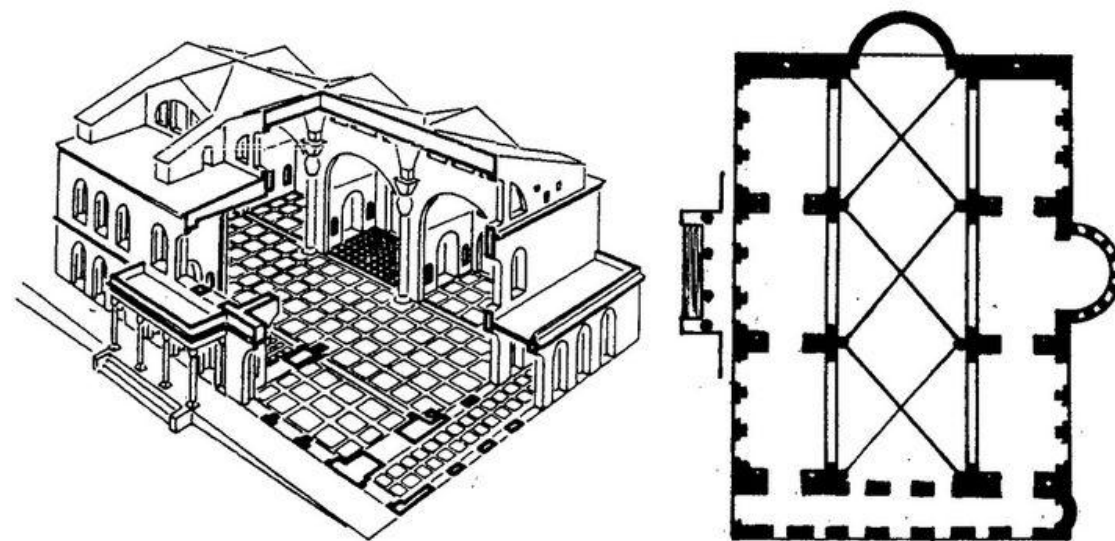

Like a living room today the Atrium was where Roman families entertained their guests but it had a hole in the roof. Rainwater poured into a pool and was stored for drinking and washing.

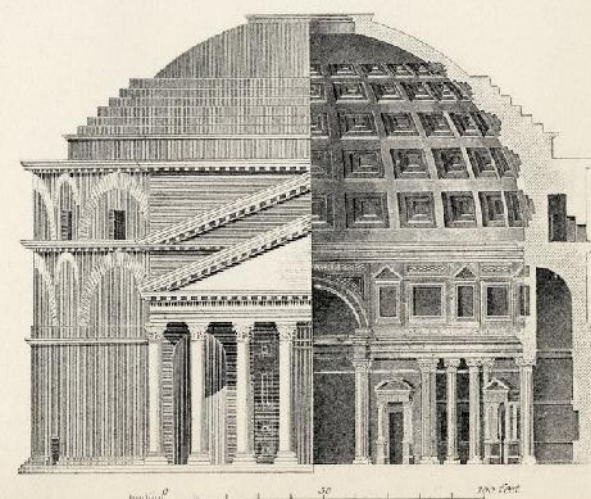

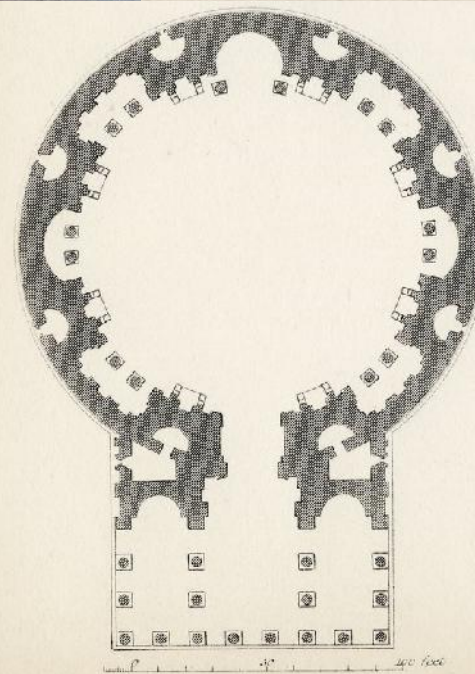

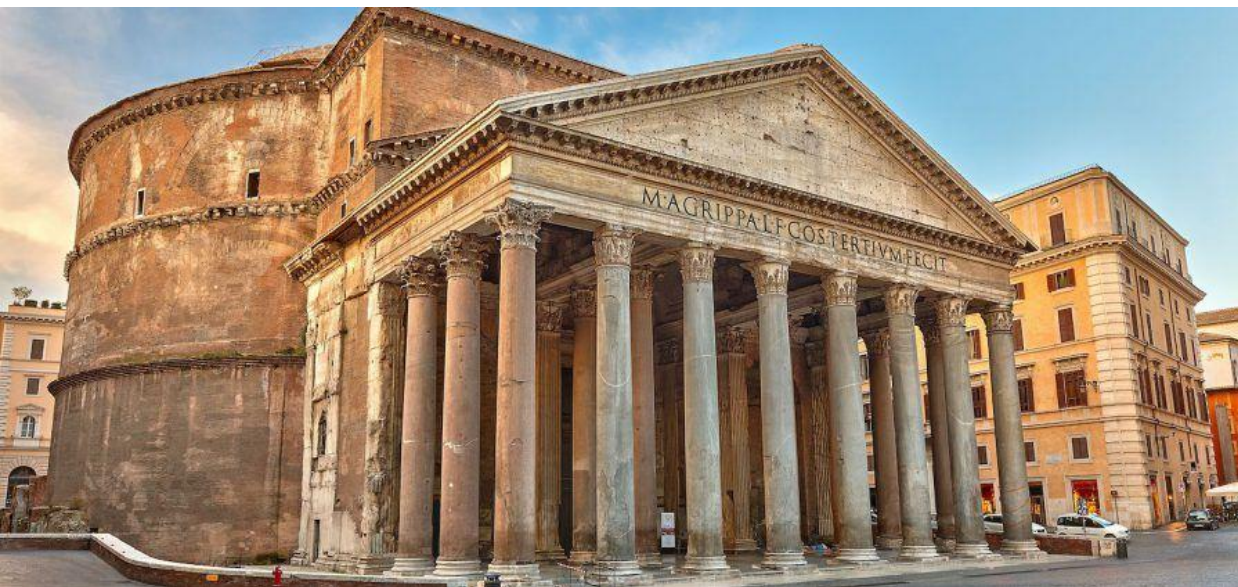

Can you eat lying down? Romans held dinner parties in a room called the triclinium, which means "three couch place." The room had three couches. Dinner guests ate while they were lying on their sides.
